

Map Your Secret Adventure

Do you have an adventure-escape near you?

Is the creek in your park or backyard just a creek or have you given it your own name like “River of Delight and Doom?” Is that a swing or do you call it a Sonic Rocket?

Introduce us to an imaginary world from your backyard or another familiar place by making a map.

Your map should include a map title that explains what the map shows, a compass rose or a north arrow to show the map’s orientation, a scale to explain distance, and a legend or key to explain your map’s colors and symbols.

Consider making your map using graph paper because the squares make it easier to keep things in scale.

Include major geographic features on your map, important landmarks, and any interesting “facts” about your imaginary land.
